125 Ways to Make Your Summer Count

UW Independent Learning helps UW-Oshkosh students graduate on time

Madison, Wis. – (April 16, 2013) – Molly Kunstman worked on more than a tan last summer. A University of Wisconsin-Oshkosh nursing student, Molly earned college credit, met her English requirement, and benefited from a tuition waiver through the UW Independent Learning program. She also saved money by living at home and working three jobs.

Molly is among more than 300 students who will earn college credit – on their own schedules -- through the UW Independent Learning program this summer.

“Our nursing students in particular need the flexibility that UW Independent Learning offers,” says UW-Oshkosh Undergraduate Advising Assistant Director Dawn Down Arnolds. “With their clinical rotations, a traditional college schedule just won’t work.”

UW students can earn university undergraduate credit in mathematics, foreign languages, English, education, sociology, history and more. Each course ranges from one to five credits, and credits transfer to UW institutions. There are 125 courses from which to choose, and more than 100 are offered online.

“This convenient option allows students to start courses, do their assignments, and take their exams whenever it’s right for them,” says David Werther, director of UW Independent Learning. “It’s especially helpful for those who have had to drop a course during the school year. They can make it up during the summer and still graduate on time.”
